

Rich Vs Poor - Either One is a Choice!

Information without consistent ACTION is Useless! Take consistent action. Every day!

This Guide is Meant to be Followed Precisely for Expected Results. Don't Cut Corners.

Earn Weekly - Every Sunday With

FBPaycheck.Com

Company Benefits Include

- 5000 Registration Points
- 25,000 Silver Member Points
- Free 1 Year of Traffic & Promo
- A Profit Guarantee
- Points to Shares Conversion
- Ability to Build Networks
- Buying & Selling Networks
- Bucket List Profit Sharing
- 80% Referral Commissions
- Real Ownership in the Company and much more...

Earn $80 in Team Commissions

We will introduce new startup companies in this system for your benefit.

Each Startup company will give you benefits, offers, which will add value to your bottom line. Some companies may offer a rewards based benefit, whereas some will include real ownership in the company.

You must have signed up for the newsletter to receive information on these Startup companies. If you do this well, you will make a lot of money. Take the info provided - SERIOUSLY!

Rich Vs Poor : Here are some major differences between Rich and Poor people. One can be broke from time to time. Even rich people go broke at times. But being poor is a recurring condition, both in the way an individual thinks and how much that individual's net worth is over a period of time.

We were not born yesterday and most people have no time to read one more preachy sermon. The world is full of gurus and coaches and teachers and what have you, telling us every day, how to think, what to do, how to do, whether to do or not do and a host of stuff we get immune to.

But, there is one fact, one cannot deny. Either you are rich or you are poor. Yes, a middle class citizen is poor as well. And all of these conditions in anyone's life, is a choice. Really. A very very determined choice.

People actually choose to be rich or to be poor. This is not an overnight decision. It plays out across a span in our lifetime. Most people who are not financially successful have limits on how much they are willing to do, how much they are willing to risk, and how much they are willing to sacrifice.

Although they think they're willing to do whatever it takes, upon deeper analysis, it is found that poor people have plenty of conditions around what they are willing to do and not do - to succeed!

Poor people have plenty of good reasons as to why getting and actually being rich might be a problem. I know it might be hard to believe, but you always get what you want- what you subconsciously want, not what you say you want. You might emphatically deny this and respond, "That's crazy! Why would I want to struggle? And my question for you is exactly the same: "I don't know. Why would you want to struggle?"

If you want to discover the reason, the answer will be staring you in the face. Put bluntly, if you are not achieving the wealth you say you desire, there's a good chance it's because, first, you subconsciously don't really want wealth, or second, you're not willing to do what it takes to create it.

The major differences between the rich and poor are...

Poor people think money is more important than time. Millions of people all over the world are trading their precious time for money. You can always get $500 back, but you can't get 50 hours again. Nonetheless, the majority of people trade time for money and never realize their true potential because of it.

Rich people know that time is more important than money. Rich people never trade time for money. Moreover, they seek fulfilling experiences that dramatically alter their lives. Their careers are more focused on doing what they love and helping others, instead of merely clocking in for a meager paycheck.

Poor people are skeptical. I distinctly remember a former coworker of mine saying, "Those mechanics are a rip-off! They're always looking for the weak people. They'll charge you when you're not looking!!" He thought that everyone unjustly wanted his money and that everyone is out there to get him.

Rich people are trusting. Surprisingly, a great deal of rich people leave their car and house doors open. Conversely, in areas of poverty, you'll find that this behavior is highly unlikely to happen. Rich people have the tendency to trust those they meet (within reason) and give others the opportunity to be themselves.

Poor people find fault. People who are poor are always looking for the problems instead of the solutions. They end up blaming their environment, circumstances, jobs, weather, government, and will make an extensive list of excuses as to why they cannot be successful.

Rich people find success. Rich people understand that everything happens for a reason. Rather than letting life happen to them, they take direct action and make big things happen. They put aside all the excuses and eradicate their blame lists because they have to do what must be done.

Poor people make assumptions. When it comes to knowing the truth, poor people often make assumptions. If they want to reach out to a celebrity, they might say, "They probably don't have time to talk to me." Instead of checking the facts or asking questions, they never make a true attempt when it comes to getting what they want.

Rich people ask questions. Many rich people ask the question, "What if?" For instance, "What if I wrote an email to the president and he or she answers?" If you begin to ask questions, you will save yourself a lot of hassle. The power is in the hands of those who ask the right questions. They don't answer your questions, question your answers.

Poor people want the cheapest way. I was once shopping with a friend who only wanted to buy if they could find the cheapest clothing. They would rush to the clearance rack and pick up clothes that they didn't even want, but ended up buying because of a "deal." Unfortunately, they ended up never wearing it since they only bought the price.

Rich people want the best way. Rich people will go the extra mile to find quality material. They don't limit themselves to price and often seek service while they shop. Rich people want organized services and will never settle with items that are worthless and unusable.

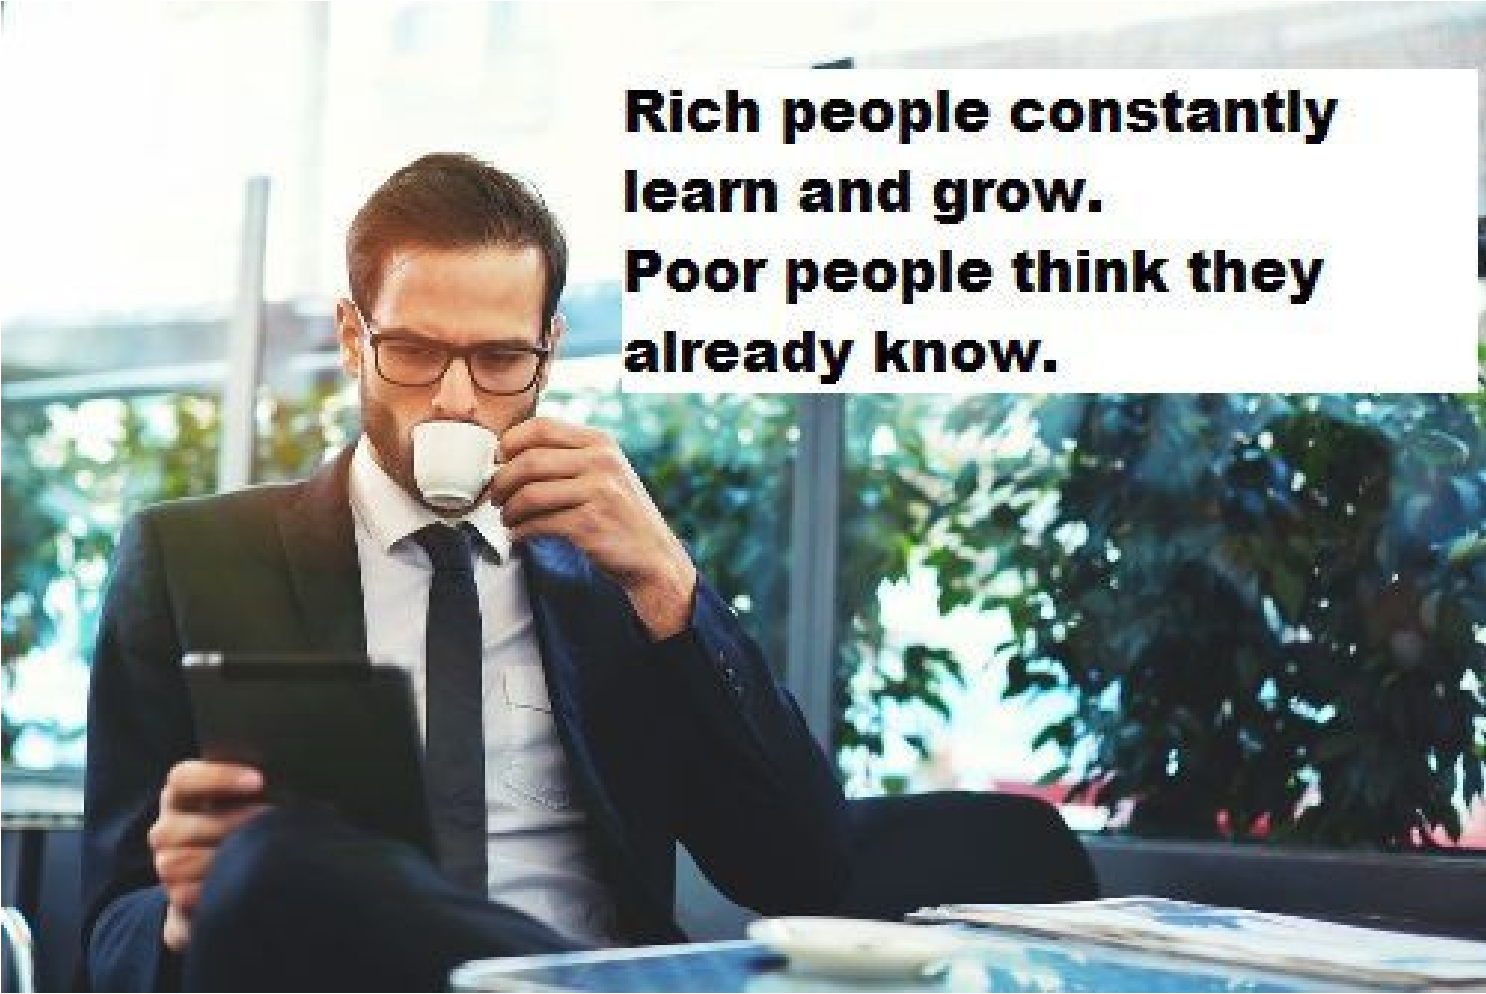

Poor people complain, condemn, and criticize. Most poor people have learned how to be poor from their predecessors. Their family members have conditioned them to believe that everything is "wrong" instead of right. If you've ever heard someone ask, "What's wrong?" you'll know what I mean.

Rich people praise and enjoy their blessings. Rich people know that they have many privileges and they don't take it for granted. Because of their appreciation of gifts, love, and circumstances, they are able to generate more. Many times, what gets praised gets prospered.

Poor people compete. When a poor person sees an opportunity, they find out how others are doing it and emulates them. Most often, they never consider another way of doing it. Instead, they settle in the belief that doing what others are doing is the best thing they can do for themselves.

Rich people create. My rich neighbors were disgruntled when they found that their Porsche did not come in a specific shade of green, which they deeply wanted. Because of this, they decided to custom build their green Porsche with unprecedented specifications. I've never seen such a thing!

A man in a dark suit, white shirt, and dark tie is sitting at a table. He is wearing glasses and holding a white coffee cup to his lips with his right hand. In his left hand, he holds a black tablet computer. The background shows a blurred indoor setting with large windows and green plants.

Rich people constantly learn and grow.
Poor people think they already know.

Poor people have big television sets. Poor people take a lot of time to drift off to sporadic images of which they often have little to no control over. They use their free time to avoid the art of thinking (which is the most challenging task) and zone out to what many have conformed to believe is "entertainment." This is a serious drug which keeps them below average and poor most of their lives. The 'Rich' entertain, while the 'Poor' get entertained.

Rich people have big libraries. Wealthy people are educated and read a lot of books. They use their knowledge in a way that benefits them. Instead of drifting off in random activities, they seek to get within their minds to understand themselves, others, and the world in which they live. In fact, as your personal library increase over the years, so will your home.

There are actually three levels of so-called wanting. The first level is “I want to be rich.” That’s another way of saying. “I’ll take it if it falls in my lap.” Wanting alone is useless.

Wanting becomes habitual and leads only to itself, creating a perfect circle that goes exactly nowhere. Wealth does not come from merely wanting it.

The second level of wanting is “I choose to be rich.” Choosing is much stronger energy and goes hand in hand with being responsible for creating your reality. The word decision comes from the Latin word decider, which means “to kill off any other alternative.” Choosing is better but not best.

The third level of wanting is “I commit to being rich.” It means being willing to do whatever it takes for as long as it takes. This is the warrior’s way. No excuses, no ifs, no buts, no maybes- and failure is not an option. The warrior’s way is simple: “I will be rich or I will die trying.”

“I commit to being rich.” Try saying that to yourself...

Getting rich takes focus, courage, knowledge, experience, 100 percent of your effort, a never give-up attitude, and of course a rich mindset. Again, what this means is that, if you are not fully, totally, and truly committed to creating wealth, chances are you won’t.

In other words, the universe will assist you, guide you, support you, and even create miracles for you. But first, you have commit!

Most importantly,

Rich people take risks with money. Rich people know, money can always be replaced. Time once gone, will never come back again. So, they take risks to create a lifestyle where they can enjoy their time.

Poor people take risks with their time. Poor people do not value their time as their most important asset. This is why they are willing to trade it for hourly paying jobs, many times at the least market wages.

Once you get rich and wealthy, please, for God's sake, don't do this...

Remember, Nhg'lu'Y j cv'KO cng'kw. The rest are simply GZEWUGU#